Character Counts

Respect

Yesterday our staff, and all Valley teachers, met at the High School and viewed the movie Resilience. If you ever have the opportunity to view this film, we'd highly recommend it. The powerful message of how traumatic events in childhood are directly linked to medical issues that directly impact students at school and life expectancy. Reading with your child, talking with your child, and strengthening your connection with them and other adults in their lives are simple, yet powerful ways to build resilience in them. We hope that your child will see some additions to our morning routines, buddies, and families that continues this work on campus.
